Bring Your Ideas to Make a Survey of the of Our Neighborhood Needs

President's Column

-Judy Fernandez

Dear Lakewood Village neighbors,
My name is Judy Fernandez and I am your new LVNA President for 2011/2012. Here is a little information about me. I have lived in this neighborhood since 1959; I attended Lakewood School, Madrone Middle school (now Columbia) and Sunnyvale High School (now Kings Academy.) I raised my children here and they along with my nieces and nephews, attended our Sunnyvale Schools.

I was involved in the previous LVRA (Lakewood Village Resident's Association) with my parents and other relatives and neighbors. Back in 1989 I and three other friends Vicki Piazza, Kathy Bray and Gerlinda Daugherty reformed the association and renamed it LVNA (Lakewood Village Neighborhood Association). I have been involved in one capacity or another since then.

When our previous President mentioned at the March meeting that no one had come forward to be our President, I decided it was time for me to step up again for the children of our neighborhood and continue all the wonderful events that we have accomplished though out the years.

My goal as your President is to get more of you involved in one degree or another. Since I have lived here for so long I know a lot of neighbors and a lot of you know me or have heard or seen my name before. I will be calling on you to help our association continue to stay strong in Sunnyvale.

Vote Yes on Measure B!

By Phyllis Fowler

When I got home Thursday, I found my ballot for Measure B in my mailbox. Fred and I have completed our ballots and sent it in already. The parcel tax the Sunnyvale School District is asking for is a modest $59.00 per year for 7 years. That is less than $5.00 per month. This parcel tax will bring approximately 1 million dollars to our district that can't be taken away by the state. This is money that stays in our neighborhoods and is desperately needed.

The news from the state is not good; there are more budget cuts coming and K-12 schools are at the top of the list. Currently, schools are anticipating additional cuts of anywhere from $400 to $1000 per student.

About 60% of school districts have had to raise class sizes to 25 or higher. Others have closed schools and laid off teachers. Our district is working hard to provide our children with the support and instruction they need to succeed in life.

Congressman Mike Honda said, "Closing the achievement gap is the key to building a strong and sustainable American workforce and an industry that will keep us internationally competitive. If we do not invest in our children, who are clearly the workforce of our tomorrow, we lose out. Now is the time, education is the key."

We need to invest in the education of our children. When I say "our children," I mean your children, your grandchildren, nieces, nephews and even the kid who lives down the street, who keeps picking the flowers in your front yard!

To accomplish this, we need your help and your vote. Included with your ballot is a prepaid envelope, so it won't even cost you postage! Join Fred and me in voting yes on Measure B, invest in our children's education and future.

April is Earthquake Awareness Month!

By Phyllis Fowler

Remember the Loma Prieta Earthquake?

It has been less than a month, since the world witnessed the devastating earthquake and tsunami that hit Japan. In California, we need to remember how catastrophic the sudden shaking of the Earth can be. Many of us remember where we were when the Loma Prieta Earthquake hit. On Wednesday, Japan was hit with another major earthquake and tsunami.

April is National Earthquake Preparedness Month and this is a good time to think about how we can prepare for the next earthquake. I copied the following advice from the Sunnyvale Emergency Preparedness booklet.

During an Earthquake
Stay calm

Move away from glass doors and windows! (I can't repeat this enough! Standing in from of glass is VERY dangerous! Ed.)

Duck, cover and hold. (Just like I learned in school, if you need practice, ask your kids to teach you! Ed.)
Duck under a sturdy piece of furniture or under a doorway. Do not duck under beds of other objects that could collapse.
Cover your head with your hands and arms to protect yourself from flying glass or falling objects.
Hold on to the furniture. If it moves, move with it. Stay under it until the shaking stops.
If you brace yourself in a doorway, be careful of the door as it could wing towards you during the shaking.
If you cannot get under a table or in a doorway, sit down next to an inside corner wall and protect your head with your arms.
Avoid heavy, standing objects such as bookcases, china cabinets, etc.
If you are indoors, stay there! Do not run outside. Quickly move to one of the safe places you have identified. Make sure everyone in your household knows where your meeting place is.

If you are outside, stay outside. Move away from power lines and poles, trees, tall buildings, walls and chimneys. Especially windows and glass!

If you are in a vehicle, stop in an open area away from trees, power poles, overpasses, bridges, and tall buildings. Stay in the vehicle until the shaking stops. If electrical lines fall onto your vehicle, stay inside; do not touch any metal inside the car.

After an Earthquake
Immediately check for injuries and fires.
Wear sturdy shoes for protection from debris and broken glass,
Use a flashlight. Do not light a match until you are positive there are no gas leaks.
Check utilities, appliances, and the sewer line for damage before using them. (Do not turn off your gas at the main breaker or turn off your pilot lights of your furnaces or water heaters unless you smell gas leaking. It can take several days for PG & E to turn it back on! This was a big problem after the Loma Prieta earthquake. Thousands of people were without gas for weeks. Ed.)

It Takes a Village

By Heather David

In 1955, construction was aggressively underway on Lakewood Village, a housing development in Sunnyvale, Calif. There was no lake and there were no woods, but perhaps the San Francisco bay and the valley's fine orchards would suffice. The plan called for 2,500 single-story ranch-style homes, a shopping center, several schools, a church and a park. Sunnyvale was in the midst of a severe housing storage and Lakewood Village would cater to the needs of both civilians and military personnel working at nearby Moffett Field.

The developer of Lakewood Village, Alec Lee Branden, had two fundamental goals when planning the project; affordability and function. To save money and expedite construction, homes were built on concrete slabs with open floor plans and tar and gravel roofs. Most residences were sold without fences and with minimal landscaping. Unlike some of his peers in the construction business. However, Braden insisted that his homes come standard with two full baths, two wall furnaces and a 1 or 2 car garage.

I would like to have more people involved in contributing to our newsletter. My goal is to have a grocery store on the North side, have the local newspaper (The Sun) distributed here and more city services in North Sunnyvale. The North side has grown so much in the past few years, we need to be heard as to want we want and deserve as taxpaying consumers.

During my term, please use the following email address for any comments or questions you might have regarding our neighborhood, lakewoodconcerns@hotmail.com.

I am looking forward to continuing our events and staying strong in Sunnyvale. ◆

Modest in overall design, they were not lacking in flair. Branden prided himself on his use of architects; as a result, the tract offered some 20 unique home designs. Traditional models like the "Nassau" had exterior brick detailing. While more contemporary plans, such as the "Biscayne," came with a large picture window. Regardless of the particular model, all Lakewood Village residences featured clerestory windows and exposed beam ceilings.

Later-built homes incorporated a rather groovy feature-a two way fireplace open to both the living and dining rooms. One early resident told me the unique fireplace was a major selling point. Another, however, offered up an interesting, if entertaining, dilemma. "When you opened up the front door, ashes blew into the dining room; when you opened up the back door, the ashes flew into the living room.

The earliest Lakewood Village homes were priced in the range of $11,000 to $15,000 and veteran did not need a down payment. Homebuyers could opt to purchase their own appliances or wrap the latest and greatest amenities into their monthly mortgage payment. Not surprisingly, houses were often sold (and sometimes moved into) before construction was completed. As one resident described it, "We moved in here without electricity!"

It was not long before Lakewood Village was a thriving community, with bake and rummage sales, block parties and a monthly newsletter called The villager, launched in 1958.

The Lakewood Village Residents' Association oversaw neighborhood picnics, a holiday lighting contest and a liv Christmas parade, as well as ensuring the construction of a community fire station and blocking the development of a slaughterhouse.

Building the Future

Lakewood Village ended up with some 1,600 homes, not the 2,500 originally planned. One reason for the decrease was the LVRA's insistence on a second park for its residents. And who was Branden to argue? He was off building other communities around Northern California attempting to bring the American Dream to as many people as possible, as quickly as possible. In the late 1950s, at the peak of its productivity, Branden Construction Company was producing an average of 25 homes per day.

A three-time recipient of the American Builder Award from the National Homebuilders Convention in Chicago, Branden had constructed more than 10,000 homes in California before his death in 1972, at the age of 51. In additional to Lakewood Village, the San Francisco Bay area had Branden to thank for Brentwood Village in Newark, Palma Ceia Village in Hayward, Peralta Village in Fremont and Tropicana Village in San Jose. Following Branden's untimely passing, many of his communities began to show signs of neglect. Homebuyer tastes has changed, some folks opted to move to larger homes and renters started to replace them.

Today, Lakewood Village is one of Branden's best-kept housing developments. It is also one of the most affordable places to live in the Silicon Valley. For example, compare a Sunnyvale Eichler, mere minutes away, to a Branden Lakewood Village contemporary model. Both are modest midcentury ranch homes, offing the benefits of open floor plans, considerable light and blurred boundaries between indoor and outdoor spaces. The Eichler can run two to three times the cost of a Lakewood Village home. The comparison is not to suggest that the two homes are the same in overall design and quality, but it does point out that they both offer quite similar features.

In addition to affordability, Lakewood Village has that non-quantifiable, perhaps invaluable benefit of community. In 1991, after a nearly 20 year absence, the Lakewood Village

Neighborhood Association and reformed and the newsletter reinstated. Some of the community's earliest traditions were revived and continue to this day, including the annual picnic, the Holiday parade and the widely publicized holiday lighting contest. The LVRA's Social Committee, however, was replaced with its modern equivalent; a website. This is, after all, Silicon Valley.

Lakewood Village Now & Then

Sarah Daugherty, a 50-year resident

In May of 1959, I purchased my home in Lakewood Village. We moved in on the 4th of July! The house was a 3 bedrooms – 2 baths with a modern electric kitchen, a dining room and a 2 car garage. The kitchen had a clever hanging cabinet over the counter, you could open it from either the dining room or the kitchen. There was a beautiful picture window on one side of the front door and a small narrow window on the other.

Our area of Lakewood Village was built for a squadron of navy personnel that had been stationed in Hawaii and received orders to return to Moffett Field. When the first group arrived not all of the houses were finished, but Branden soon had a house for everyone.

When we moved into our home, there were pear orchards all around us. We had a dairy and a little store that sold milk and other groceries. There was a drugstore with a post office in the back, and a five and dime store, kind of like a 7-elven. The Village was close enough to downtown Sunnyvale that you could walk if you needed something that you could not get in our little shopping area.

We were so excited to have found our home and immediately we felt a part of a community. Our house was only a couple of blocks from the school, our kids could walk to and from without our worrying about anything happening to them. We had wonderful neighbors and quickly made many friends. We were all about the same age, so we had a lot in common. There were always kids playing in front yards and on the sidewalks. The school would have movies on Saturdays for a nominal charge. They could go alone or with a friend and we didn't worry. We made a lot of lifetime friends that we still see and hear from today.

Diane Lizardo

New resident

When we began looking for a house, my husband and I were trying to find something affordable and not in need of too much work, but that's a tall order in this area. Our realtor and I looked at approximately 50 homes in our price range. They were about 800 to 900 square feet, with two bedrooms, one bath, no closets, no garage, very little yard and a lot of work to be done. They were in neighborhoods that included duplexes and apartment buildings, with narrow, cluttered streets. After a couple of months, we felt as though we were going to have to settle for less.

But one day, as we drove through a Sunnyvale neighborhood, I noticed the streets were very wide, there were no apartment buildings or duplexes and children were out playing in their yards, a large park runs through the entire neighborhood, where people jog, walk, bike and take their dogs, I was seeing community.

The house we pulled up to was bank-owned and had been empty for more than a year. It had wonderful trapezoid windows on the front of the house and a two-car garage. These things gave me hope, but I was not going to get excited yet; I was almost afraid to see the inside. When the door opened, the first thing I saw was a huge brick fireplace that divided the living room from the kitchen/dining room. The home was built with an open concept and had exposed beams; it was lovely. Although, the carpets and windows needed to be replaced and it definitely needed some paint, the house was in great shape. Three large bedrooms with big closets in each, linen closet (a luxury I had not had for years!); two full bathrooms, plenty of windows, a sizable kitchen with an L-shaped counter/breakfast nook—wow! Every room had those wonderful exposed beams and the home was very spacious at 1,150 square feet. After seeing the yard, it was all I could do to contain myself: plenty of room for our dog, a patio area, a big yard to host barbecues and room to garden. Since moving in, I find it hard to leave to go to work, I just want to stay and enjoy my home all day.

April is Earthquake Awareness Month!

Listen to the radio for emergency information
Do not use the telephone except for emergencies. Non-emergency calls may overload the circuits, preventing others from reporting emergencies.
Expect aftershocks. There have been over 600 aftershocks in Japan since the first one hit.
Have a reunion plan. Disasters have a good chance of occurring when your family is not gathered together. The children may be a t school. You may be at work, the shopping center or the theater. To prepare for these possible separations, take a few minutes and develop a reunion plan. The plan will help you get back together, or if that is not possible, to let each other know you are okay.

Choose one place near your home in case of a sudden emergency, such as a fire.

Choose at least two places outside your neighborhood in case you cannot return home. Possibilities include neighbor's, friend's or relative's homes, local schools, churches, parks or community centers. If you arrive home and no one is there, it will give you some places to start looking.

Choose a friend or relative who lives at least 100 miles away who can be contacted by all family members if it becomes impossible to reach the reunion locations. You can report to them where and how you are and learn where and how other family members are as well.

Be sure each family member carries the contact person's name and phone number with them. Fill out this contact card and make copies for everyone in your family:

Tips For Coping With Your Children's Fears

From the Sunnyvale Emergency Preparedness Handbook

Before the Disaster
Your children are less likely to experienced prolonged fear or anxiety if they know what to expect after the disaster. Include your children in the preparation phases of your family's emergency plan.

☐ Talk about your own experiences and/or read aloud about disasters, such as earthquakes. Local libraries have a number of good books on earthquakes and other disasters.

☐ Ask the staff at your children's school about the school's disaster plan.

☐ Provide your children with the name of a relative, neighbor or friend who will care for them until the family can be reunited.

☐ Help your children assemble their own emergency supply kit.

After the Disaster
☐Encourage your children to express their feelings of fear. Give them a chance to talk and ask questions.

☐ Your children may need both verbal and physical reassurance that everything will be all right.

☐ Hug them frequently!

☐ Include your children in any clean-up activities. It is comforting for children to watch the household begin to resume its normal functions, and to have a job to do.

☐ Have your children write a story or draw a picture. Explain to your children what has happened.

☐ Replace your children's toys and security items (blankets, etc.) as soon as possible.

☐ After acknowledging their fears, point out their abilities and the things they can do for themselves

☐ Include in your emergency supplies, a deck of cards, a game that does not need batteries, a couple of books your child has not read.

☐ Have your child pick out a toy and a book to put in your emergency kit.

☐ Let each child help choose a favorite food to put in your emergency kit. (for example, Macaroni and Cheese or their favorite soup.. Ed.)

☐ Allow your child to be a child!

With a little planning, you can anticipate most of your child's fears and concerns. Preparing for disaster helps everyone in the family accept the fact that disasters do happen. Preparation provides an opportunity to identify and collect the resources needed to meet basic needs after disaster. Preparation helps; when people feel prepared, they cope better and so do children. ◆
