WELCOME TO THE NEWSLETTER OF THE LAKEWOOD VILLAGE NEIGHBORHOOD ASSOCIATION

Event Announcements

LVNA General Meeting - July 10

Our next quarterly neighborhood association meeting is Wednesday, July 10, 2024 from 7:00-8:00pm at the Lakewood Park Building. We have a busy agenda - Joanne Navarro-Tran from the City's Department of Public Safety will be talking about neighborhood preservation and answering our questions. We'll have a presenter to talk about the planned high-rise housing complex by Calabazas Creek. Finally, we will talk about the plans to tear down the Lakewood Shopping Center and replace it with mostly townhouses.

LVNA Summer Picnic - Sep 7

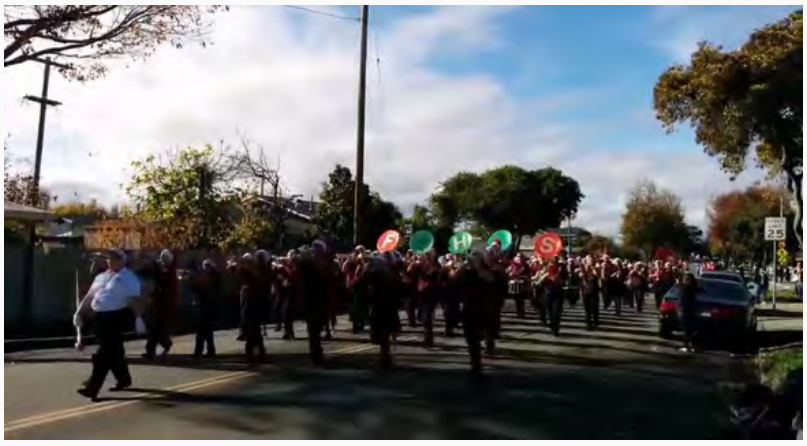

After a hiatus of many years, we are bringing back the annual Lakewood Village summer picnic. It will be in Lakewood Park on September 7 from 11:00am - 2:00pm. There will be games, music, and free food (including vegetarian/vegan options). Come meet your neighbors and participate in some friendly competition. Volunteers are needed to help plan, set up, and/or cook. Please email vp1@lvnasv.org if you're able to help. Note that we have canceled the LVNA National Night Out (NNO) event on August 6 in order to do the picnic.

Bringing Back the Lakewood Village Holiday Parade

For anyone who has lived in Lakewood for a while, the mention of a "holiday parade" will bring back nostalgia for the times when Lakehaven and Sandia roads closed off to host a neighborhood parade. Santa, fire trucks, antique cars, cookies, elected officials, and more were included. A devoted group of Lakewood residents is trying to bring the parade back this year. Anyone who worked on this in the past can tell you it can be very rewarding, but takes a great deal of work to pull it off.

If you want to see our holiday parade return, we need help! We need people to help with planning/staging, marketing, safety/security, decorations, set-up/tear-down and more. Now is the chance to sign up - we need at least six months of planning for this to work.

Let's bring back the Lakewood Village Holiday Parade this year! Email board@lvnasv.org to help make it happen.

Greetings from Mayor Klein

Hi LVNA residents,

It's your Mayor Larry Klein! I've been on Council since September of 2016, and I've been serving Sunnyvale for the last 20+ years. I was asked to give you some updates on what is happening from a city standpoint, so this is the first of many updates.

At our May 21st meeting, Sunnyvale City Council officially approved the final contract to build the Lakewood Branch Library and Learning Center Project!

After years of input and decision, it will soon become reality. The new branch library project will consist of a new 22,771 square foot, single-story library and learning center that will also include a small kitchen, community rooms (available after before/hours), MakerSpace, storage., and more. The building is situated along Lakechime Drive where the parking lot will be expanded to allow more off-street parking (and EV Chargers) for all the residents headed to this destination.

More than just a stand-alone branch library, the Lakewood Branch Library and Learning Center is a real partnership between the City of Sunnyvale, the Sunnyvale School District and Fremont Union High School District. The Center will serve as a primary resource for literacy, learning and wellness activities for the residents of north Sunnyvale.

There is also a partnership with the Friends of the Sunnyvale Library to help provide furnishings and help the long term operations.

Many residents in north Sunnyvale live between two to four miles from any library. As a result, the Lakewood area has the lowest percentage of residents with Sunnyvale library cards of any neighborhood in Sunnyvale. Some of our City's residents with the most to gain from library services have the most difficult time accessing those services. This project will bring library services closer to these residents—from City services, to FUHSD Adult School services, to more community rooms and areas to study for students.

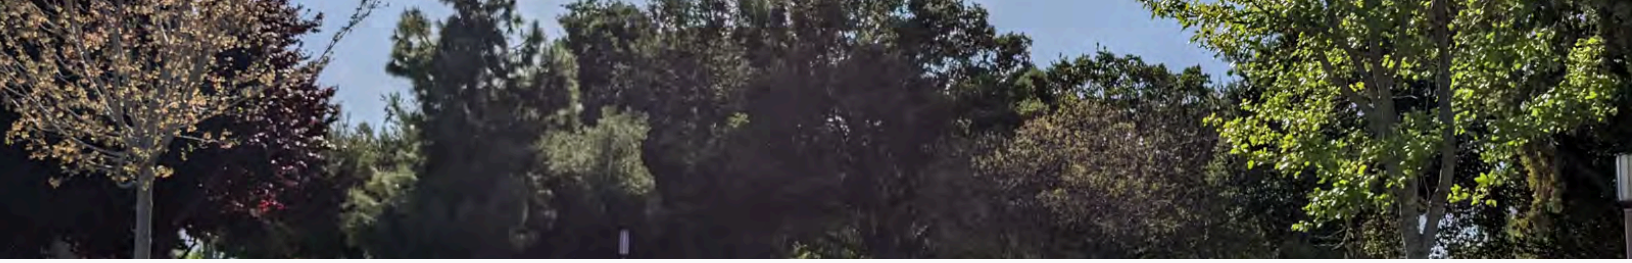

I am overjoyed that Council unanimously approved the final contract!

The next steps will be for the contractor to finalize the project schedule with breaking ground most likely in August. Construction is expected to be complete by the end of 2025. I look forward to celebrating the improvements coming to Lakewood and more over the next year!

If you have questions, concerns or ideas, you can always join my virtual Livestream on Facebook, watch my updates on YouTube, reserve time at my office hours, or just email me at COUNCIL@larryklein.com Learn more at www.LarryKlein.com

Until next time,
Mayor Larry Klein!

Use Access Sunnyvale for Service Requests/Complaints

In the July general meeting, Mayor Klein emphasized that residents should use the City of Sunnyvale's online portal Access Sunnyvale (https://sunnyvale.dynamics365portals.us/) to submit online services requests and report issues. This is faster and gets a quicker response than a phone call. Additionally, when you submit a request via Access Sunnyvale, you get a ticket number. If your ticket is not promptly addressed/resolved, you should contact our Councilmember Omar Din (dincouncil@sunnyvale.ca.gov) or Mayor Klein (larry@larryklein.com) for help (and include your ticket number).

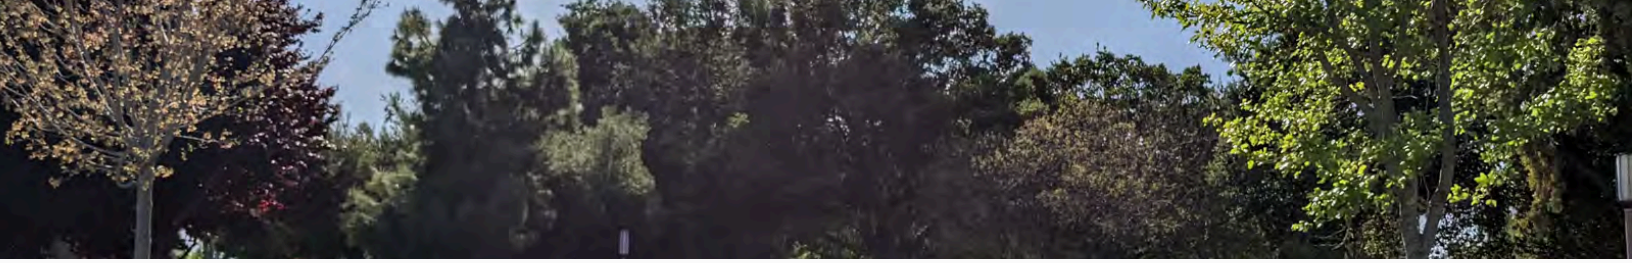

Some of the many things you can use Access Sunnyvale to report are:

- Abandoned vehicles (vehicles parked in the same spot for more than 72 hours)
- Graffiti
- Traffic issues (if the violation is in progress and requires an officer response, you can call 408-730-7181)
- Noise disturbances (including airplane noise)
- Needed park maintenance (e.g., broken toilets, trash cleanup)
- Needed sidewalk repairs
- Tree maintenance

These all have the option to require a response from City Staff and create a paper trail of things that need maintenance or attention. Please help maintain our neighborhood and report things that need the City's attention.

Here are the steps to using Access Sunnyvale:

1. Go to https://sunnyvale.dynamics365portals.us/
2. Choose the topic area for your service request (you can either search for a topic or select from several icons).
3. Enter the information for your service request. The more detail you can provide, the better and easier it is for the City to respond.
4. Be sure to select "yes" for "Response from City Staff Requested?". This guarantees you will get a staff member to reply to your request.
5. Choose "Submit" at the bottom. You will get an email with your ticket number and follow up information will be sent to your email address.

Did you know about these?

There's a lot happening in our community, more than any one individual can track. Here are some of the many interesting resources in our community.

Sunnyvale Sustainability Speaker Series

Since 2017, Sunnyvale's Sustainability Commission has sponsored 2-3 events each year featuring renowned experts in sustainability research and/or policy development. You can find all of the recordings here: https://www.youtube.com/playlist?list=PLGJ-ThSMJyqMcsJTcTNQuzHy3cYyMpCHb

The next set of speakers will kick off in the 2024-2025 fiscal year.

Spotlight on a Local Non-Profit: Livable Sunnyvale

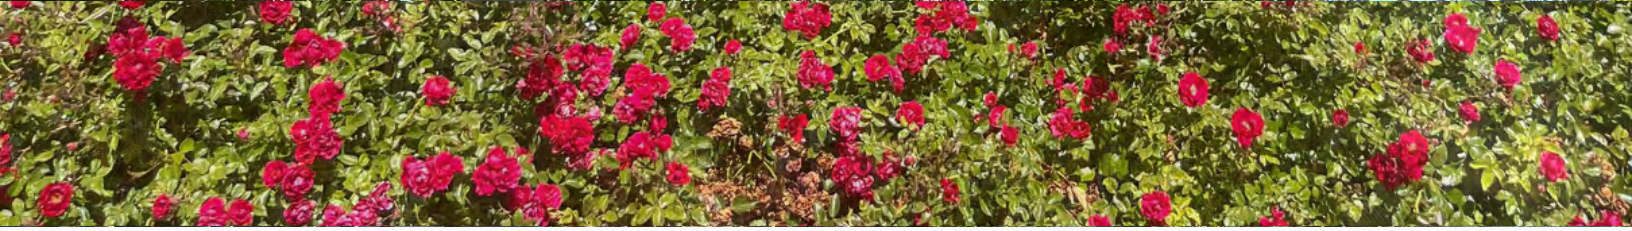

Interested in housing? Interested in transportation? What about sustainability? Equity? If you answer yes to any of those, then this month's local non-profit is for you.

Livable Sunnyvale is a non-partisan advocacy coalition that focuses on housing, transportation, sustainability, and equity in Sunnyvale. The group started in early 2014 as an affordable housing committee. Two years later, in 2016, the committee decided to become a non-partisan advocacy coalition focused on affordable housing in Sunnyvale. The name was "The Sunnyvale Sustainable and Affordable Living Coalition" (SSALC). In 2018, they changed the name to Livable Sunnyvale, with a website to match. Livable Sunnyvale members work to make Sunnyvale a desirable place to live. They also partner closely with the City and other groups. Past work has focused on: increased minimum wage, increased affordable housing; bike safety programs and regional transportation solutions; safe parking sites and initiatives to support unhoused community members; resident training to support advocates and leaders in our community; and the Moffett Park Specific Plan, the El Camino Real Specific Plan, and the Housing Element 2023-2031

Livable Sunnyvale is made up of all volunteers. Earlier this year, they received the Non-Profit of the Year Award from the Sunnyvale Chamber of Commerce. They meet the first Wednesday of every month in a hybrid (virtual + in-person) setting. Recent meeting topics have included affordable housing, updates on the Village Center plans for the Lakewood Shopping Center and for the plaza at the corner of Duane Ave and San Rafael St, and information about NovaWorks. In February, they hosted a candidate forum for the Assembly District 26 primary election.
Livable Sunnyvale is taking the lead in trying to improve the proposed plans for the redevelopment of the Lakewood Shopping Center. Current plans replace the shopping center with 100 new townhouses and reduce the retail space from its current 64,000 sq ft to approximately 10,000 sq ft.
For more information, visit the Livable Sunnyvale website at www.livablesunnyvale.org

Congratulations to our winners!

The Checkered History of Lakewood Village (1956 – early 2000s)

[Editor's note: Thank you to Katharina Woodman at the Sunnyvale Heritage Park Museum for researching and writing this article. This article was originally published in September 2021. It is the second of a two-part series. Miss the first article in the series? Check out "Lakewood…Before Lakewood" on Page 8 of the December 2023 Villager here.

Before anyone could even dream of a development to be called Lakewood Village, the City of Sunnyvale had to define the city's borders. During the 1950s, annexation wars were raging in the area between Cupertino, Sunnyvale, Santa Clara, and San José. Cupertino attempted incorporation in 1954 in order to avoid being swallowed up by Sunnyvale and San José. Santa Clara and Sunnyvale engaged in litigation over land along Lawrence Station Road which, Santa Clara claimed, "illegally spilled into Santa Clara territory". Sunnyvale was eager to secure Lockheed and General Motors to build factories in the city and had earmarked parcels of land for those companies. Mountain View protested the annexation of land set aside for Lockheed by Sunnyvale. In 1956, there were nineteen different annexation proceedings involving the City of Sunnyvale and their neighbors. Eventually, the city lost General Motors to Fremont, but the relocation of Lockheed proceeded as planned, when land was annexed north of Highway 101 and on either side of Lawrence Station Road (now Lawrence Expressway).

By 1956, Sunnyvale had attracted so many major companies that people flocked to the city in search of employment. Among others, Lockheed had relocated here, an area described by an employee as "all beanfields then, and the Bayshore Freeway was only a two-lane road." The last traffic light on the Bayshore Freeway between San Francisco and San José, at Fair Oaks, was removed in 1960. The city of just under 10,000 inhabitants in 1950 would grow to 53,000 citizens by 1960.

In 1956, the new development of Lakewood Village advertised inexpensive homes for Lockheed and military personnel, with no down payment necessary for veterans. It was to consist of 1,732 small single-family homes in "Eichler-esque" style. The area was laid out between Highway 101 to the south, Tasman Drive to the north, Calabasas Creek to the east, and Fair Oaks Avenue to the west, but it was bisected by Lawrence Station Road. Branden Construction Company boasted they were "building the homes of tomorrow in Sunnyvale". Though smaller than houses in other areas of the city, the homes found buyers very quickly: young families moved into the two- and three- bedroom houses. The neighborhood quickly formed a strong sense of community, when families helped each other out with babysitting and shopping. Major attractions were neighborhood parties for the Fourth of July, barbecues, and block parties, where children were allowed to light their own sparklers. Parents got together for card games and social events while children played out in the yards and in the street. Holidays were celebrated together with families taking turns hosting them.

The flier is the original advertisement for the new development and was posted in the Sunnyvale Standard (May 1956), courtesy of SHS archives.

From the beginning, though, residents felt ignored by the City and like a "stepchild", compared to other parts of Sunnyvale. Services were not at the same level, and residents had to fight for amenities such as a nearby fire station. In order to stand united, the residents formed the Lakewood Village Residents' Association in 1958. They started a newsletter, named The Villager, and held social events. During its existence until the mid-1970s, the association brought about several changes, including the building of a fire station, avoiding the construction of a slaughterhouse, and keeping land earmarked for the creation of Fairwood Park instead of more housing. Having to cross Lawrence Expressway in order to make it to Lakewood Park enticed some mothers to petition for a green space on the east side of the highway, which later was expanded to include a playground.

Beginning in the 1960s, demographics changed in the community; families who had outgrown the small homes moved away into bigger ones elsewhere and military personnel, posted to other parts of the country, led to an ever-changing population. Since many of the original owners kept their houses and rented them out, the percentage of renters increased. At the same time, the number of families declined when single people moved into the small homes. The cohesiveness of the neighborhood broke up, children grew up and moved out, new families didn't participate in social events, and children didn't play together outside anymore.

A 1968 census indicated a moderate income level in the Lakewood Village population, as well as good education. However, the survey also revealed there was no sense of community pride. As a result, a grant was requested to study the reason for the rapid turnover in residents which contributed to a lack of "natural leaders."

Lawrence Expressway was extended to run from Mountain View-Alviso Road all the way south to Quito Road in Saratoga, a total of 8.1 miles. When a proposal was made in 1972 to widen the roadway, residents expressed their concern over reduced pedestrian walkways and bike routes. The same year, residents rejected a plan for more low-income housing to be built for fear of overcrowding schools. Complaints of overcrowding and rowdyism reached a new height when a 13-year-old student was killed riding his bike home from school. The student had preferred to cycle in order to avoid the school bus where he was being bullied.

An emergence of gangs in the 1970s led to complaints from Lakewood residents that the public safety department wasn't keeping the neighborhood safe. Homeowners would stay in their garages during remodels in order to protect building materials from being stolen. The appearance of the neighborhood was declining: garages were turned into living spaces without permits, derelict cars were left out in the road, and trash accumulated. Homes became sites for illegal businesses and renters failed to take care of the general upkeep of houses and yards. There was a much higher occurrence of code violations in this part of town than elsewhere. Potential home buyers were turned off by the appearance of the community, so everyone's home value decreased. It was rumored that the safety department did not enforce fines because residents could not afford to pay for the improvements or the fines.

The local shopping center fell into disrepair due to juvenile vandalism and neglect. The residents demanded a facelift and started working with owner Gene Lee to improve conditions in 1975. When Mission College planned to build a 15-story unit adjacent to Lakewood in 1984, residents again rallied and protested, claiming that the building would cast a shadow on the houses next to it and traffic would be increased, as was the case with moviegoers who raced through the village to make it to the Mercado Theater in time. Although voter turnout and civic engagement were low, residents would organize and fight for a cause together. The additional widening of Lawrence Expressway in 1986 in order to add carpool lanes between Highway 237 and Prospect Road was such a cause; cyclists demanded bike access, bike lanes, and crossings or overpasses.

When a local student was the victim of severe burns, community members proved once again that they would take up a cause together. The neighbors helped the victim's family in multiple ways, giving back to the family who had done so much for the community, including the fostering of "wayward children" and organizing youth baseball and football leagues. In appreciation for all they had done in the past, their neighbors now took care of the family in need.

In March of 1988, a 30-year-old three-bedroom house in Lakewood Park was priced at $150,000. Over the decades, rising house prices and rents pushed residents out of the area, leading to more deterioration.

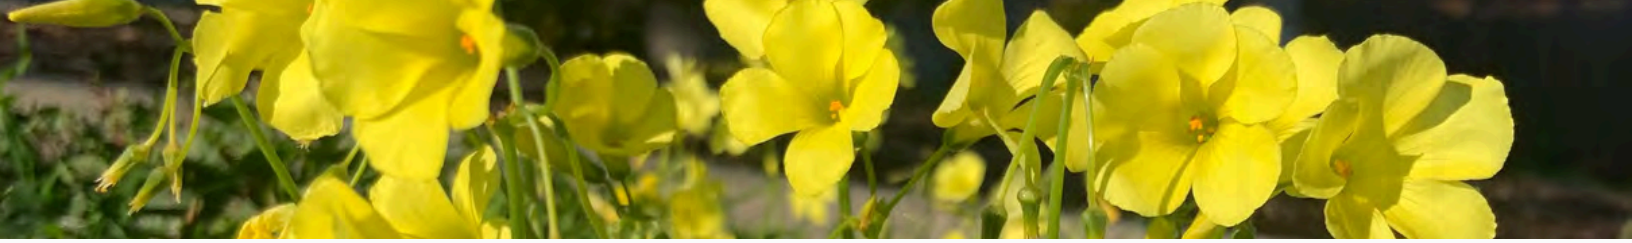

In 1991, a new organisation was formed: the Lakewood Village Neighborhood Association. In an attempt to deal with the lack of property upkeep, The Villager newsletter prompted outrage when it posted a list, five houses each, of the most well-kept and the ugliest. Neighbors perceived the accusations as unfair, because not everyone could afford to paint their house or make the necessary upgrades.

In the early 2000s, the story of Lakewood seemed to come full circle, with a diverse population of young families again moving in and an increase in community spirit. Once again, children played with each other as they had in the early days of the development. The famous Lakewood Holiday Parade had been reinstated, and families lined the streets to cheer on floats and Santa Claus. Homeowners outdid themselves decorating their houses for the holidays, literally lighting up the neighborhood.

As part of a new partnership with the City, "Dumpster Days" were introduced in 2000 as part of a general attempt to clean up the neighborhood and help residents who couldn't afford improvements. Twenty-one dumpsters were placed throughout the village during the summer, with neighbors coming together to help each other by carting away unwanted items. This new community/City cooperation paid off and led to a transformation of the village. When statistics indicated the highest numbers of code violations in the city were occurring in Lakewood Village, a dedicated staff member was assigned to help in a concerted effort to clean up one area at a time. Ninety-five homes on Lakehaven Drive and Lakeknoll Drive were targeted, and City staff approached every home with personnel who spoke Spanish, Vietnamese, English, and Tagalog. Fifty-three of those homes were improved with corrections of code violations, including fixing garage, patio, and roof conversions, and removing overgrown vegetation. Several houses received new coats of paint with free paint provided by the City, new driveways were installed or old ones restored, and cars no longer cluttered the streets. After that success, the City decided to keep the improvement plan in the budget, to be known as the Neighborhood Enhancement Program and extend it to more streets. Residents reported new opportunities to talk to neighbors when everybody was bringing discarded items to the dumpsters and encountering people they had never seen before.

In 2003, it was the most diverse neighborhood in the city, with a population of Latino, Filipino, Vietnamese, and Caucasian residents. Latinos and Asians were the biggest group, with Caucasians making up 35%.

Lakewood Village has been set apart from the rest of the city, not just by its odd geography, but by demographics and the higher rate of resident turnover. In times of crisis, though, neighbors have pulled together to stand up for their rights and their community, whatever the mix of ethnicity and social status.
